

The Cube Residential Complex

ENTRANCE D

Tokomaru BLOCK 10

BLOCK 11 James Coe

Wellington High School

BLOCK 1

ENTRANCE C

BLOCK 2

BLOCK 12 Te Ara Hihiko

Tainui Terrace

ENTRANCE B

BLOCK 3 Ofenberger

Student Centre

MASSEY UNIVERSITY CAMPUS

Hayward Terrace

Wallace Street

ENTRANCE A

BLOCK 4 Student Central

Library

BLOCK 5

BLOCK 6

ENTRANCE E

Hargreaves Street

ENTRANCE A

T33-T33A

T39

T38

T37

BLOCK 7

ESS

Finlay Terrace

KEY:

- Pathway beginning
- Pathway end
- Sculptures
- Gardens
- Main pathway route
- Alternative pathway routes

Pukeahu Pathway sacred places and secret spaces

Sculptures on the map

Located alongside the Museum building, this memorial is dedicated to the prisoners from Taranaki who were taken from their land, and who passed through Wellington to prison in the South Island. Many prisoners died whilst in custody.

A Hikoī Ki Te Waipounamu took place on 20th - 29th March 2000 to revisit the prisoners' journey.

The major stone of this memorial symbolically depicts a prisoner standing with bowed head wrapped in his prison blanket.

An 8.5m welded aluminium sculpture titled Poutaha – meaning both a marker and a memorial, constructed by Sopolemalama Filipe Tohi, in 2014.

Located outside Block 5, Executive Seminar Suite, the work responds to the Wellington campus site (Puke Ahu), which was once a garden within the Puke Ahu pa.

A sculpture comprising two slabs carved from Oamaru stone, by Ross Hemera, celebrating his Ngāi Tahu and South Island whakapapa.

The sculpture has a combined weight of five tonnes, and is located between Te Whare Pūkaka, (Block 1) and Te Ara Hihiko, (Block 12).

Ross Hemera sates, "We (Ngāi Tahu) say this stone is our ancestor, so to work with it is very important to me. The carvings relate to the whakapapa of the stone itself and the Ngāi Tahu narratives of creation and discovery."